FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The third annual edition of the Journalism Review, published by the Bureau of Press and Broadcasting Research of the Montana State University School of Journalism, is being distributed to editors, publishers, broadcasters and journalism educators throughout the nation.

Featured in the 32-page issue are articles by Dean Nathan B. Blumberg, Profs. Olaf J. Bue, Edward B. Dugan and Dorothy M. Johnson, and William F. Johnston, managing editor of the Lewiston (Idaho) Tribune and 1960 professional lecturer of the School of Journalism. Also included is a portion of a thesis written by John P. Fought on the late John Hurst Durston, editor of the Anaconda Standard for many years.

The journal carries summaries of five research reports on the problem of juvenile names in crime news. The reports were written by journalism students for the course on law of the press.

The journal is edited by Dr. Frederick T. C. Yu, associate professor of journalism and director of the research bureau.
